ASSOCIATION FOR DEVELOPMENT AND DIPLOMACY:
THE FDA IN FCDO
AND FCDOS

Who are we?

The Association for Development and Diplomacy is the FCDO section of the FDA - a professional association and union representing more than 25,000 UK public servants and professionals working across government departments and agencies.

We are there when our members need us, offering professional advice, support and personal representation, and we act as a strong and pragmatic voice on their behalf.

We are committed to promoting diversity and equality in all we do, and believe that all members should have the chance to make the most of their talents and enhance their careers.

Why should you join?

For PROTECTION at work

Each year, hundreds of members come to the FDA for confidential, professional advice and support on work-related issues. With over 100 years of experience, we offer highly personalised, quality representation including support during organisational change, exits and redundancies.

For a STRONG VOICE

We act as a powerful advocate for public services and the people who deliver them, defending the reputation of our members in the media and with ministers, and in the HR profession. We have built strong working relationships with employers, and as civil service specialists we have unparalleled experience and understanding of the sector.

For SUPPORT in your career

FDA Learn provides high-quality learning and development to civil servants, engaging with employers to support 8,000-plus learners each year. All of our sessions are free for FDA members.
